

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

New film release Dark Bridge Binaural Brainwaves goes live online with controversial soundtrack

Bangkok, Thailand – 17 October 2014

Starting today, feature film Dark Bridge Binaural Brainwaves that utilizes special sound technology is available for viewing online. Prefaced by a health warning for certain risk groups, the film has garnered attention for its controversial soundtrack. In a cinematic first, certain sounds with theta range brainwave frequencies are layered over the existing soundtrack to produce a unique and hypnotic effect in audience members. The movie is now available for viewing at Vimeo on Demand (www.dark-bridge.com) for US$4.99 (72 hours rental). Subtitled versions are available in German, Spanish, Japanese and Korean.

In the film, Brainwave Entrainment technology is used to provoke a temporary change in the consciousness of the audience, creating a whole new movie experience. Director Marcelo von Schwartz, with the support of Sound Therapy website SoundDrugStore, utilises theta frequency brainwaves in the soundtrack for full hypnotic effect, enabling audiences to actively experience the film rather than just passively spectate. This cinematic first places him at the forefront of the Neurocinema movement.

The narrative of Dark Bridge Binaural Brainwaves (color, English, 90 mins) follows the dreamlike journey of David White, an American doctor visiting Bangkok for a medical conference. Through a series of uncanny flashbacks, he unwittingly uncovers a heavy debt of his father's hidden past.

Marcelo von Schwartz, the director and producer of Dark Bridge Binaural Brainwaves, is an Argentine film director, architect, photographer and sound architect. He has worked on over 15 film/video projects, most of which focus on the dark side of things.
